In 8, Macfadyen and Co. counterclaimed in respect of bills accepted for which no produce came forward, but the decision was favour of the bank. To a non-legal mind the defendants were worsted on that point plaintiffs ought to have been entitled to recover on theirs, otherwise, we may ask what is the difference between acceptance in one case and payment in the other? The judgment was for the defendants, as regards 1 and 2, although by the terms of the letter of credit the produce was to be beld under lien to the drawees, and not to the Board of the so-called Bank of China and paid for. The decision, we presume, is legally simply on a technical detail.
